Forecast For Scotland
Issued by Met Office Aberdeen
at 0400 on Saturday 12 Jun 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Sunny spells and, mainly in far north, showers.

Today:
A bright day for many with some good spells of sunshine, especially across eastern areas. Most places will be dry although the far north and the Northern Isles will see occasional showers, these dying out later. Occasionally fresh southwesterly winds.

Tonight:
Western, central and the north become mostly cloudy with patchy drizzle over hills and coasts, perhaps more persistent rain for Shetland later. Elsewhere dry with late sunny then clear spells.

Sunday:
North of the Great Glen, mostly cloudy with outbreaks of rain, occasionally heavy across Shetland and later the western Northwest Highlands. Elsewhere dry with warm or very warm sunny spells.

Outlook for Monday to Wednesday:
Overnight rain soon clearing Monday then sunny spells and showers. Cloud and outbreaks of rain across central and northern parts Tuesday but south largely dry. Sunny spells and showers Wednesday.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.